

There's an ad being run on CNN that is so offensive you need to check it out. The product is Cialis. The caution that erections could last up to 4 hours. This is sending the wrong message especially to young people. I don't like using this language, but when I have to hear it all day it really makes me angry. They should modify this commercial. Thank you June Hall